Please, Not a Camelot

Back in 1960, the musical Camelot* was produced for the first time on Broadway. It tells the fictional sad story of King Arthur, his queen Guenevere, Sir Lancelot and the knights of the round table, all within the amazing kingdom of Camelot. When Arthur first meets Guenevere, he sings to her of the wonders and magic of Camelot:

*A law was made
a distant moon ago here
July and August cannot be too hot
And there's a legal limit to the snow here in Camelot*

*The winter is forbidden till
December
And exits March
the second on the dot
By order, summer lingers through
September in Camelot*

*The rain may never fall
till after sundown
By eight, the morning fog
must disappear
In short, there's simply not
a more congenial spot
For happy-ever-after-ing
than here in Camelot*

*The snow may never slush
upon the hillside
By nine p.m. the moonlight
must appear
In short, there's simply
not a more congenial spot
For happy-ever-after-ing
than here in Camelot*

Arthur, having received an education ahead of his time under the tutelage of Merlin the magician, earnestly seeks to build a just and thriving kingdom in Camelot, somewhere in England. His ideals for having justice and liberty through the land are to be promulgated by his hand-picked knights.

The snake in the garden is Lancelot. He seduces Arthur's queen, Guenevere. All Arthur's work begins to unravel and the kingdom eventually collapses into civil war.

Superintendent's Soliloquy
"Our job is to be faithful today, tomorrow, and as long as we have dealings with this precious ministry."

At the end, Arthur, broken-hearted in the midst of the devastation of his country and castle, comes across a young boy named Tom. Tom has heard tales of the wondrous Camelot. Arthur's spirits rally and he encourages Tom to remember all that once was Camelot:

Arthur:
*Each evening, from December to December,
Before you drift to sleep
upon your cot,
Think back on all the tales
that you remember
Of Camelot.
Ask ev'ry person if he's heard
the story,
And tell it strong and clear
if he has not,
That once there was a fleeting
wisp of glory
Called Camelot.
Camelot! Camelot!
Now say it out with pride and joy!*

Tom:
Camelot! Camelot!
Arthur:
*Yes, Camelot, my boy!
Where once it never rained
till after sundown,
By eight a.m. the morning fog
had flown...
Don't let it be forgot
That once there was a spot
For one brief shining moment
that was known As Camelot.*

Over the years of working in and loving Logos School, I have frequently been overwhelmed by God's goodness to this school. Time and time again He has not only blessed us beyond my deepest desires, He has also brought us through trials I was sure would close our doors.

Sometimes the sweetness of working with these children is beyond my ability to articulate. Seeing and hearing the joy that parents often express lifts my soul. God has brought together a truly amazing set of teachers and staff members who just continue to impress me by their devotion to Christ, these students, and this work.

So how does Camelot's story figure into the beauty and work of Logos School? Doug Wilson has more than once referred to me as a Puddleglum, and he's been right. In fairness, I think part of my job is to try to anticipate how things could go wrong, and ideally plan to keep those things from happening.

Put simply, I pray I may not live to see the day that someone would have cause to remark, "Oh yeah, I remember Logos School in its heyday. It was a really strong Christian school then. The kids were happy and the grads were amazing! Man, you'd never know that now!"

There are many sad stories in Scripture that follow the same arc: a rise from obscurity, overcoming trials and hardships, finally a 'golden age', then some kind of sin tolerated, and finally a total collapse. There are individual stories like Saul's, on up to the rise and fall of the nation of Israel.

Or Solomon's age of peace and prosperity, the building of the glorious temple, then unfaithfulness on the part of the people of God, followed by the destruction of the temple by pagans, not once, but twice! God clearly does not regard great works the same way men do; He will destroy anything that

Varsity Play

Capturing the Essence of Intrigue

By Sonya Isenberg

A tale of intrigue. A tale of love. A tale of war. This perfectly captures the essence of the Logos High School varsity drama production this year, The Three Musketeers.

This play was directed by Mrs. Heather Lloyd, who was new to directing Logos productions, though definitely not new to theater. She freely adapted a version of the play so it would better encompass all the wonderful elements of a story: conflict, suspense, humor, and resolution. She did an admirable job, not only of arranging a wonderful storyline, but also bringing the plot to life through high school students.

Mrs. Lloyd said, "Working with the Logos students on The Three Musketeers made directing easy. They came prepared for practice, well versed in their lines and remembered blocking from previous days — all of this made putting The Three Musketeers together a delight. The students really made the story come alive and the performances intriguing."

The Three Musketeers is set in England in the 1600's. The whole play is speckled with hilarious soliloquies by Planchet (Preston Evans), the "mere servant" who follows the Three Musketeers around. The curtain opens on a young lad (Luke Mason) by the name of D'Artagnan, a soldier eager to join the Musketeers of the Guard: Aramis (Danny Bradley), Athos (Thomas Sensing), and Porthos (Jon Morris.) D'Artagnan soon joins the group under the instruction of Monsieur de Treville (Boden Lloyd), and the four become a heroic powerhouse throughout the rest of the show.

However, all good stories contain conflict. The evil Cardinal Richelieu (Ethan Howell) uses his equally devilish agent, Milady de Winter (Sofia Minudri) to plot against King Louis (Nathan Miller) and his wife, Queen Anne (Sonya Isenberg.) Throughout the story, the antagonists use secret letters and a priceless necklace to frame the good, albeit naïve, characters.

Milady, torn from her old love for Athos, and the Cardinal Richelieu (Ethan Howell) with King Louis (Nathan Miller).

D'Artagnan (Luke Mason) defends Constance Bonacieux (Claire Ahmann).

Cardinal, fueled by his past crush on Queen Anne, and Lord Buckingham (Knox Merkle), confused by his unrequited love for the Queen, make this storyline delightfully complicated. Furthermore, D'Artagnan has his own share of love when he falls for the beautiful Queen's lady in waiting, Constance (Claire Ahmann.)

In an intense scene, Athos stumbles upon Milady after years of thinking she was dead. Milady attempts to make Athos fall for her again, without success. All was quiet in the theater house as the audience members sat on the edge of their seats. Sofia Minudri said this scene "was one of the tougher ones I've ever done... it demanded some fairly intense and genuine acting." And "Mrs. Lloyd had us break it down line by line, so we could really pull all the pain and emotion out of it."

All conflict is resolved when Milady takes refuge at the convent, under the eye of the Abbess (Darcey Stephenson) and is finally exposed. She is hauled off to execution, the becomes an idol raised up in His place, even if He designed it and commanded it to be built.

Closer to us in time and location are the stories of the great 'ivy league' schools in the east: Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth and others. Through the vision, prayers, sweat, fund-raising and work of many faithful Christians in times past, these schools were built with the stated purpose of glorifying Christ Jesus. (Harvard still has this purpose engraved in its foundation stones.) How the mighty are fallen!

Do I believe, therefore, that it is inevitable that someday Logos will fall into the hands of those who hate our Lord? No, I don't think it's inevitable. He who promises to be faithful to a thousand generations is certainly capable of sustaining Musketeers are applauded for their courageous efforts, D'Artagnan is knighted, and he marries Constance.

Mrs. Carla Courtney dedicated so much of her time to expertly craft the costumes for the show. She sewed ball gowns and hip inserts and all sorts of accessories that made this show a masterpiece on the costuming front.

Mr. Jacobs built the intricate set, consisting of a huge wooden and fabric backdrop that turned to reveal a town setting on one side and a castle wall on the other. The stage crew and stage managers (Anna Rosendahl and Irene Hong) kept everyone in line backstage.

His works for as long as He desires. But only His Word lasts forever. I don't believe our job is to contemplate whether Logos School will remain faithful in 5 years or 50 years. Our job is to be faithful today, tomorrow, and as long as we have dealings with this precious ministry. I pray Logos will remain and thrive as long as faithful families and staff are replaced by others who are faithful in their turn, and may our doors not stay open one day beyond that succession.

Arthur and his Camelot fell, as do all the works of men. Christ and His Kingdom will reign forever and we have His promise that all work done in Him and for Him will endure. "If any man's work which he has built upon it (Christ's foundation) remains, he shall receive a reward." (I Cor. 3:14)

Physics Class Marshmallow Catapults

Irene Hong and Josiah Anderson launch a marshmallow while Abigeal Ilesanmi and Jason Yoon cheer them on. Photo by Patricia Isenberg.

Physics problems involve calculating vectors, forces, energy, and acceleration. One of the physics class design projects was to build a catapult to launch a marshmallow.

Teacher Loren Euhus had teams build catapults using a mousetrap, plastic spoon, Popsicle sticks, and duct tape. They competed for longest distance, accuracy, and of course, a team member catching the marshmallow in their mouth.
