Annie brings smiles

By Autumn Pratt

The sun will come out tomorrow...it's a good thing to hear in November. Once again Annie brought in smiles, starring Morgan Schlect as the little redhead who never gives up hope.

The musical has been popular since it was written in 1976. Not only is it the rags-to-riches story of an orphan, it is the story of a man who realizes what riches really are.

More than a thousand people attended the four performances in the Logos gym. They were treated to characters of every sort, from the lonely Warbucks (Mr. Tom Garfield) and his meticulous secretary Grace (Abby Lundgren) to the sinister Rooster Hannigan (Shane Stokes) and his ditzzy, flirty girlfriend, Lilly (Kira Langworthy). A favorite was Miss Hannigan, played by Sarah Page. Miss Hannigan was Sarah's first lead role and she pulled it off perfectly, even more impressive when you compare her charming real-life personality with that of the brassy orphanage mistress.

The orphans were the youngest members of the cast, besides the dogs. They put a lot of work into their perky, punky, but cute characters, and in particular perfected the art of grunginess. Besides Annie there were eight orphans, ranging in age from eight to 15: Hannah and Isabelle Breese, Florence Adesope, Lucia Wilson, Esther Niemeyer, Kayte Casebolt, Sofia Minudri, and Rozy Gray. Add in servants, bums, policemen, stars, and of course FDR (Mr.

Morgan Schlect as Annie with four orphans, Florence Adesope, Lucia Wilson, Kayte Casebolt and Hannah Breese.

Jim Nance) with his wheelchair, and you have quite a crowd backstage. Almost 50 students were involved. The locker rooms looked like a refugee camp.

Such a large cast took a lot of organization, especially since the director, Mr. Garfield, also had a role in the play. Two stage managers kept everything running: Allison Gray and Megan Story. Mrs. Katie Bouma, choreographer, kept everyone from tripping over their own feet, and Jonathan and Allie Erber got the cast in tune with musical direction. Mrs. Carla Courtney and a few other mothers managed to get everyone spiffed up for the '30s with their costuming abilities.

Preparations started soon after the May auditions. There were summer practices, and a musical theater elective (with a lot of help from Mrs. Emily Sumpter). Mr. Garfield said it was the most elaborate show he's directed at Logos, but also the most fun.

It's a Wonderful Life (And School)

High on anyone's list of Christmas movies has to be It's A Wonderful Life. It made its theater debut in 1947 but didn't hit classic, icon status until it was shown repeatedly on TV, starting in the '50s. One possible reason for its universal appeal is that most people do indeed think, at some low point in their lives: 'Gee, perhaps everyone would be better off if I hadn't ever been born!' In the movie, George Bailey, the protagonist, is rightly upbraided for this ungrateful thought by his visiting guardian angel, Clarence.

Then Clarence gets heavenly permission to go ahead and show George how sad the lives of those he loves would be without his influence. Actually, it appears that the whole town of Bedford Falls would have been an absolute den of iniquity had not George Bailey been born. The delightful and, well, 'wonderful' conclusion is that George sees how ungrateful he was and he exults in the love of his family and friends. And he also gets the necessary money to keep him from going to jail. (But personally I find it frustrating that the fink Mr. Potter never gets his comeuppance, if you know what I mean!)

Following this theme, I've often pondered: what would life have been like if Logos School had never been born...er...founded? This is proposed, not out of the depths of despair or self-pity, but just as a thought experiment. Assuming for a moment that God had not chosen to give us this gift, how might many lives and locales be different today?

(Cue wind machine. Snow stops falling, and...action!)

The Garfields are living in one of the many small towns in northern Idaho, where Tom has been the high school art teacher for three decades. His children have gone through the local public schools where, while not offering a challenging academic program, at least there haven't been any gang or drug issues. There is of course no discussion about "world views" or biblical applications of the kids' studies as the family gathers around the dinner table. Like their parents, the kids don't see any connection between learning and faith.

Meanwhile, in Moscow, Idaho, a small pre-school program moved into the basement of the Church of God in 1981. It closed seven years later and was replaced by a string of federally-funded or private programs for young children. The roller rink that was built also in 1981 struggled along and finally closed its doors in 1987. The building was put up for sale. After a few months, a church purchased it and did some extensive remodeling. Years later, as college apartments grew up around the building, the church moved out, selling the building to a developer who knocked it down and built a small strip mall on the site.

As home schooling became more popular in Moscow and nationally during the 80's, the local school district established, with little resistance, a rigorous system of oversight of home schoolers. Today there is a publically funded office of Home School Management which grants approval (or not) to the curriculums of hundreds of parents home schooling. Once in a while a disgruntled parent publically voices a desire for more freedom to educate privately; no one pays much attention.

The chamber of commerce has no reason to notice an increase in families moving to the area primarily for any local school, public or private. At least no one has said anything like that. Local business owners often lament how so few of the young people they hire are honest and hard-working.

Across the nation, Christian schools and home schoolers continue to do what they do, many of them wishing for something, well, more substantive that they could offer the students. What national Christian school conferences there are continue to espouse the same rather unremarkable and pseudo-modern methods of instruction. There is no solid core philosophy that excites and attracts Christian teachers and administrators.

Hundreds of would-be Christian school teachers have come to the conclusion that teaching must not be for them. They want the opportunity to express their faith in the classroom, which rules out government school teaching, but they also want to teach in a rigorous academic environment, which, sadly, rules out most Christian schools. So, they seek other careers; some pursue a ministry, others a nine-to-five job that holds little interest for them. But what else is there to do?

Thousands of parents across the nation have biblical convictions, but see no practical options for inculcating those convictions in the formal education of the children. Many are daunted by the idea of comprehensive home schooling. It's a bleak landscape: no one has heard of 'classical, Christian education'; there are certainly no curricular materials being produced for that kind of education; no training conferences, books, videos, or speakers. Since there are no such schools, there are no graduates with a classical, Christian education who go on to start more schools, who use their training and love for the Lord to spread the Gospel's work in their communities.

(Cue the snow to start falling again.)

Like George Bailey, we don't have to stay in the nightmare of non-existence. In God's kindness Logos School, in spite of all our human failings, has managed to thrive in Moscow, and even bless thousands of families and teachers we don't know. Please join me in thanking Him again and again for this great blessing! Remember to pray for Logos in 2013, that we may continue to follow the Father's wondrous story for this ministry!

"Zuzu's petals! How about that, Bert?!" (Sorry — I had to throw that in.)

According to Morgan (Annie), the best thing about the play was the camaraderie backstage. "It was nice when we were so nervous to be able to come backstage and have all the encouragement and inside jokes." It took some teamwork, but Logos drama pulled together one of their hardest shows yet...with a smile.

Third Place in the Mountain Christian League Tournament

Volleyball Wins Third Regular Season Championship

Allison Gray, Rozy Gray, and Ruth Saunders in action.
At right, Morgan Schlect sets it up.

By Rozy Gray

The Lady Knights began their season with only one returning starter from last year, but this did not stop them from winning the Mountain Christian League (MCL) regular season championship for the third year in a row with a win-loss record of 16-2. Overall the team's record was 19-6 which included the matches against White Pine league teams.

This is the 18th year Jessica Evans has coached volleyball at Logos. The Varsity players were (seniors) Morgan Schlect, Allison Gray, Kira Langworthy, Abby Lundgren, (sophomores) Naomi Miller, Rozy Gray, and (freshman) Claire Ahmann. The swingers (who play varsity and JV) were (junior) Lydia Nadreau, (sophomores) Ruth Saunders and Lizzie Schlect. The rest of the JV players were (juniors) Rosie Greenfield, Kamilla Niska, (sophomore) Elly Kline, and (freshmen) Summer Stokes, Sonya Isenberg, Sarah Miller, and Darcey Stevenson, and Alli Wallace.

The most intense match of the season was the most important: the match which decided the League Champions:

Knights vs. Oaks. Logos lost the first two games 24-26. But came back and won the next two. In the final game the Knights were behind 9-13, but Allison Gray served them up to 14-13 and from there Logos took the game and the regular season championship.

At the MCL tournament Logos won two matches and lost two. The team came home with the third place trophy; a disappointing end to a great season. The Oaks took first.

Allison Gray, and Naomi Miller won a place on the All-League First Team. Morgan Schlect was selected for the All-League Second Team. The team Most Valuable Player award went to team captain Allison Gray. Naomi Miller received the Most Improved award and Lizzie Schlect received the Knight Award.

The Junior Varsity team also had a successful season with a MCL record of 13-1 and an overall record of 13-3 (including games with Deary and Troy). The team's one loss in the MCL play was their first match of the season against Kootenai who they beat later on in the season. They had a new coach this year, Margeaux Wintz '09. She did a fantastic job, and said she really enjoyed it. She is looking forward to next year.

Our Junior High girls did very well this year too. They had two teams, and each won all but one game. Their coach Mallory Wilson '10 is proud of their improvement over the season.

New Bleachers

The new west side bleachers. Another set is on the east side.

Logos now has new gym bleachers! Not only much safer and more attractive, they are electric so they slide in and out with the touch of a button.

Christ Church, which has used the facility for Sunday services since 1999, paid for half of the $60,000 bleachers. The cost to Logos is about $30,000. The installation took one week in late November.

Some have asked about the yellow seats — our school colors are still primarily navy blue and white. We added a third color, gold, several years ago to make our teams' uniforms sharper looking. White seats would show the dirt very quickly. Hence the yellow seats for "LHS" (Logos High School).

Alumni News

Welcome Back

Dr. Ben Bowen '98 speaking to the student body.

The alumni events of 2012 stretched over a two-day period this year. The alums were invited to attend any or all of the planned events. Lunchtime on December 21st was an informal time for former students to connect with former teachers and staff at the staff table where abundant pizza was served.

Dr. Ben Bowen '98 Moscow, spoke to the secondary school referencing John 15. He related the command to love one another in verse 17 in terms of how one integrates their Christian life and their profession. The drama elective then gave a fun readers' theater rendition of The Grinch.

The annual Trivia Day competition ensued with the secondary students filling eight tables and the alumni filling two! The alumni attendees gave a strong showing but were unable to defend their previous win.

The boys' Varsity Basketball Team gave the spectators, including alums, a win to cheer and celebrate. After the game any alumni that cared to attend were treated to more pizza, veggies, drinks, and dessert. The following day the gym was open for playing basketball and hanging out followed by more high school basketball. The Varsity girls, and JV and Varsity boys played Kootenai Thunder in Knights Court with a clean sweep!

In planning for next year, a plan for alum versus alum game is being kicked around. It is a blessing and a pleasure to have our former students visit and see what is going on at their alma mater.
