Benefit Auction Hits New Heights

Enthusiasm for Logos School hit new heights at this year's "Red Carpet Cowboy" Benefit Auction. Not only did more people attend than ever, the auction raised more money than ever.

God truly blessed the efforts of about 40 volunteers led by Logos Development staff and the steering committee of Paula Casebolt, Kelly Driskill, Rachel Jankovic, Lauren McMurray, and Kim Minudri. More than 140 packages sold through live and silent auction with contributions from 114 businesses and 56 individuals. Thanks also goes to Moscow Family Dentistry and 23 other businesses who contributed more than $22,000 through various sponsorships.

The $61,000 raised beat the previous record of $40,000 in 2012. The number of attendees rose from a previous high of 220 to 270.

The auction item that raised the most money for Logos was a Summer Evening Feast for 35 Friends —a dinner of roast lamb, taboule salad, desserts and wine hosted by Dave & Ann Casebolt and Francis & Donna Foucachon. It sold for $7,400!

Many helped to make the auction a success, including Kim Minudri, Gwen Spencer, and Paula Casebolt.

The live auction began with second grader Sara Casebolt's cake.

A record 270 people attended the benefit event in the University of Idaho SUB Ballroom.

Oh, The Things You Will See!

It's overcast on an early Saturday morning. Anyone with sense would be at home, possibly still in bed, or at least sipping a hot beverage and easing into the day. But in a classroom at Logos more than a dozen otherwise normal teens are already working hard. They are sitting before open notebooks, listening to a bearded local attorney explain the way to deal with hearsay objections.

"You need to remember who the party opponent is, and apply the appropriate rule. Otherwise you won't be able to deal with the objection!"

The other coach chimes in: "Of course, if you can also use the evidence to your advantage, that would take the cake!"

And these otherwise normal teens eagerly make notes in their notebooks, as though they fully understand all that's been said. Which they do, as is demonstrated by their follow-up questions.

Over and over, the Logos Mock Trial A and B teams, run their case, with attorneys directing and crossing witnesses. The witnesses, in turn, concentrate on expressing their story and fleshing out their characters.

Regardless of 20 years of watching and working with our Mock Trial teams, I never cease to be amazed at these kids. It's not just their keen minds and pleasant demeanor. It's the whole unique picture! My own teen years and attendant questionable use of time are seared in my memory. These students are light years more mature than I was at their age! I don't even have a good excuse: I was raised in a very godly home by two of the strongest Christians I've ever known. Nevertheless, my faith and my education never complimented each other as they do in the lives of these, and many other young adults at Logos.

It's Friday morning in the Logos auditorium. Being dress uniform day, the young children seated in scattered pairs around the lunch tables look very sharp. But that's not what causes me to pause as I pass through the room. This is one of my favorite times of the week because it's when the sixth graders pair up with first graders to hear the younger ones read aloud from a book. Some of the pairs are siblings; these are easy to spot, not just from their similar looks, but from the arm of the older one around the shoulders of the younger one.

Tom Garfield has been Logos School's superintendent since its founding in 1981. Many of his past columns may be found in The Return of Dear Parents: Selected Columns on Communicating the Christian & Classical Vision to Families.

Superintendent's Soliloquy

"This certainly isn't the education I received, nor did the vast majority of the parents of these students. Right. That's actually the whole point; this education is about Christ and all His good gifts."

All the pairs are concentrating on their delightful story, broken only by the occasional quiet correction:

"That word is a funny one," says the wise elder, "It's 'bounced', see the 'b' at the beginning?" And they go on with the story line.

I look from one pair to another. There is no impatience or body language indicating the older students would rather be somewhere else. There is also no need for a looming teacher to keep them on task — it's obvious all the children are enjoying this short quiet time together.

It's Friday night in the Logos gym and a ball is literally in full swing! The music is not too loud but it fills the room, matched in decibel level by shouts of laughter as the secondary students fly through the complicated steps of the Posties Jig. Overhead the chandelier glows. The elementary students had their time on the dance floor earlier. Now the 7th through 12th graders are dashing between rows of bodies, grabbing a hand, spinning wildly to the next partner. No slow waltzes for these full-tilt students! They do many of the same dances as the young ones, but at Autobahn speed. As they finish, gasping and grinning, the boys take the hand of their lovely partners and escort them off the floor. Then they all make their way to the refreshment table to drink gallons of water and shove down some cookies.

On this night I am one of the chaperones. Two pairs of unknown teens enter the gym. I go over to greet them and they tell me that they are MHS students, invited to the dance by some church friends who attend Logos. The boys are in t-shirts and jeans, the girls are wearing dresses that wouldn't pass muster normally. I let them all know the basic rules:

1. The guys need ties.
2. They can dance one dance with their "friend," then the guys need to seek a different girl for each of the rest of the dances.
3. Get to know the other kids here.

They readily agree to the rules. I fetch two ties from the drama costume closet. The guys put them on and they all charge off into the fray. As I spot them from time to time through evening, I see them all mingling and mixing with the other students.

The dance ends on time and the students gather to thank the caller and sing the Doxology. The two public school young men seek me out, hand me back the ties, and all four students thank me. I ask them if they enjoyed it: "Oh yeah! It was a blast! Our dances aren't like this; this was really fun!" the girls exclaim. I encourage them to come again. The lights

Engineering Team Places First at Regional Competition

The newly formed Logos Engineering team took first place out of seven teams at the regional Tests of Engineering Aptitude, Mathematics, and Science (TEAMS) competition on March 4 at Moscow High School. Logos scored 50 out of 80 points. They edged out second-place Moscow A by 2 points.

"Rebekah Kim really was the powerhouse behind this team," said Coach Jim Nance. "She organized the meetings and the practices, and worked hard to encourage everyone to do their best." Other team members included: seniors Joonyoung Ahn, Jay Cho, Alicia Jeong, Jonathan Nance, Seonghun Park, Nellie Yager, and sophomore Jason Yoon.

The TEAMS program is an annual STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Mathematics) competition that helps students discover their potential for engineering. The competition has two parts: solving problems and essay writing. The March event had 80 problems based on scenarios about urban planning (this year's theme). The teams were given descriptions, graphs, charts, and equations, and from this information had to solve 80 problems in 90 minutes.

Young Mock Trial Teams Finish Second and Third at State

By Miles Whittling

The court room grew deathly silent as the judge in the black gown entered. You could hear a pin drop. Two teams rose expectantly. Each one had prepared for months, waiting for the two hours that lay ahead.

Logos A, the 15-time State Champion, faced off against Ambrose A in an epic struggle for the Idaho State Mock Trial Championship. After finishing second to Logos five times in the past seven years, Ambrose was crowned the 2014 Idaho State Champion.

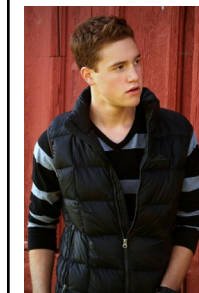

The case this year contained a mythical daredevil being sued by the city of Twin Falls for a failed jump over the Snake River and the riot that followed. This year the Logos A team was composed of senior Shane Stokes, juniors Jameson Evans, Elizabeth Schlect, sophomores Daniel Bradley, Sonya Isenberg, Sofia Minudri, and freshmen Luke Mason and Emma Story.

Arguing for the B team was junior Emilie Dye, along with freshmen Jackson Dickison, Preston Evans, Ethan Howell, Erica Johnson, Emily Littlejohn, Knox Merkle, and Miles Whittling. Despite their youth, both teams won at regionals and prepared themselves to face the best mock trial teams in Idaho.

At the state competition, the Logos A team, sailed into the semifinals undefeated. Meanwhile the Logos B team lost to Centennial but beat Ambrose A, qualifying for the semifinals on the last day of competition. In the semifinals the two Logos teams went head to head. Logos A eventually prevailed, earning them a spot in the championship round.

From the semifinal matchup, Sofia Minudri (Logos A) was awarded an outstanding attorney award and Ethan Howell (Logos B) won an outstanding witness award. Shane Stokes

Senior Named National Merit Finalist

Shane Stokes

Logos senior Shane Stokes is among the approximately 15,000 finalists in the 59th Annual National Merit Scholarship Program.

To become a finalist, a semifinalist must have an outstanding academic record throughout high school, be endorsed and recommended by the school principal, and earn SAT scores that confirm the student's earlier qualifying test performance. The semifinalist and a school official must submit a detailed scholarship application, which includes the student's self-descriptive essay and information about the semifinalist's participation and leadership in school and community activities.

Shane, who entered Logos in 2007 as a sixth grader, plans to pursue a degree in Mechanical Engineering at the University of Idaho. Over the past 18 years, Logos has had 40 National Merit Finalists and 22 commended students.

come up and the clean-up crew plunges in to restore the gym to normal use.

It's any weekday morning at Logos. The students, 5 year olds to 18 year olds, short to tall, black, white, Asian, Native American, in other words, just normal kids, begin to fill the halls and classrooms. They greet me with smiling 'good mornings!' and a few high fives.

This certainly isn't the education I received, nor did the vast majority of the parents of these students. Right. That's actually the whole point; this education is about Christ and all His good gifts. Recently, the ACCS accrediting team of three headmasters noted how happy and content the children are here. That's as it should be.

Oh, the things you will see at Logos! Thanks be to God!

Snow White Draws a Crowd—Actors and Audience

By Miles Whitling

Students flocked to participate in this year's Junior High play, Snow White. Director Jody Jacobs had 26 actors to work with; 12 from each of the seventh and eighth grades plus two sixth graders.

In the first scene we find Snow White (played by Bea Whitling) acting as a servant girl in Queen Brangomar's (Maddie Wintz) palace. To stop Snow White's marriage to Prince Florimond (Karsten Schumaker), Queen Brangomar sends Snow White into the woods to be killed by the huntsman (Nathan Miller).

In the woods, the huntsman lets Snow White go and she finds a small cottage. In this cottage she is met by seven dwarves: Blick (Brian Vis), Flick (Ben Euhus), Glick (Bennett Schlect), Snick (Nic Minudri), Plick (Luther Michaels), Whick (Jake Hughes), and Quee (Joe Ahmann) who ask Snow White to live with them. The dwarves stole the show, entering this scene with boots on their knees, beards on their chins, and bald caps on their heads.

While this is happening, Queen Brangomar finds that she has been tricked and is transformed by a witch, Hex, (Krista Dye) and her cats (Makayla Whitlatch, Megan Dye, and Zoie Yager) into a peddler woman (Jemima Merkle). In the witch's cavern we are met by dazzling special effects of "fire" and "smoke".

This peddler woman makes her way to the dwarves' cottage where Snow White has been living. While the dwarves are away, she entices Snow White to bite the apple and she falls into a deep sleep. Devastated, Prince Florimond and his retainer (Calvin Michaels) find Snow White in a coffin made by the dwarves. After waking Snow White, the prince joins the overjoyed dwarves who march to the palace.

There they are met by the maids of honor: Rosalys (Keidi Anderson), Astoliane (Bel Merkle), Amulette (Grace Belshner), Christabel (Jenny Hoyt), Ermengarde (Morgan Kiblen), Guinivere (Shania Hughes), Ursala (Eleanor Rheingans), Lynette (Isobel Niemeyer) and Sir Bombas (Ben Doolley). In the palace they overthrow the Queen and dance their way to the curtain call.

The set was mostly constructed by Mr. Jacobs and Calvin Michaels, as well as some borrowed props from NSA and Moscow Building Supply. Another great helper was Mrs. Chelsea Niemeyer who did hair styling. Creating an amazing set and play, Mr. Jacobs once again put on a dazzling Junior High play.

Lady Knights Never Quit

By Miles Whitling

“Never gave up and never quit,” is how Coach Matt Gray described the girls’ basketball team in their first season as a member of the Whitepine League.

Highlighting the season was the girls’ best game over Timberline 44-29, at the District Tournament. This game was a major victory allowing the girls to advance on into the tournament. The Lady Knights finished the season in sixth place with a 2-10 record (the girls’ season record can be found at <http://www.whitepineleague.com/201314/gb.html>). At Districts the girls were able to win their play-in game against Timberline but later lost to Summit Academy.

Naomi Miller was a major force on the team this year averaging 9.8 points, 7 rebounds and 3 blocks per game, being the top rebounder, blocker, and scorer, finishing the season as the team MVP, and earning a place on the first team all-league. Junior Rozy Gray led the team in steals with 40 and also finished the season with the Most Improved Player award. The Knights’ Award was given to two juniors, Lizzie Schlect and Elly Kline.

This year the Lady Knights had no seniors and so the team relied mostly on its seven juniors: Rosy Gray, Rebekah Kim, Elly Kline, Lizzie Schlect, Hannah Roberts, Kristina Roberts and Naomi Miller. Sophomores, Irene Hong and Sarah Miller, also contributed to the team, with Erica Johnson and Abby Euhus playing from ninth grade.

Because of flu, injuries and short numbers, the JV team didn’t have a full season of games but was able, in the words of Coach Joe Kline, to have, “great opportunities to improve their skills.” Coach Kline was proud of the freshman and sophomore girls who made excellent progress this season and earned some quality playing time later in the season and he looks forward to having a complete JV team and competing in a full slate of JV games next year.

Not losing a single game all season, the Junior High Girls were coached by Brent Belschner. The team went out with a bang, beating one of Pullman’s teams 65 to 5. Maddie Wintz, Keidi Anderson, Grace Belschner, and Jemma Merkle were the team’s eighth graders. Bel Merkle, Bea Whitling, and Shania Hughes played this year from seventh grade, with Chloe Sandmeyer as the only sixth grader on the team.

Top: Naomi Miller, the Knights’ MVP, earned a place on the Whitepine League First Team.

Middle: Lizzie Schlect plays tough defense.

Bottom: Rozy Gray brings the ball down the court.

Knights Finish Fourth in Whitepine League Debut

By Miles Whitling

Working through injuries and sickness, the varsity boys’ team finished the regular season in fourth place. Coach Matt Whitling said, “I can’t think of a season in which we have had more guys out.”

The main highlight of the season was membership in the Whitepine league and the opportunity to go to Districts. The team’s best offensive game was their victory over Timberline at home, 88-40.

This year Paul Ryan was the top scorer, averaging 20 points a game and setting a new school record of 41 points in a single game. Paul also earned a place on the 1A Division II All-Idaho Second Team and the Whitepine First Team All-League. Jonny Handel received the Knight’s Award. Trevor Morse earned a place on Second Team All-League, while Levi Wintz received Honorable Mention.

The Knights finished with a season record of 6-6 and they were 7-11 (for more details go to <http://www.whitepineleague.com/201314/bb-logos.html>). At Districts, Logos lost to eventual tournament winner Kendrick.

Senior captains Trevor Morse and Eric Jones (who was unable to play due to knee surgery before the season) led the varsity team. The rest of the varsity team included Paul Ryan, Jonny Handel, Levi Wintz and Sean Stanton, all juniors. Cotton Whitling and Alec Engerbretson (who only played in two games because of a back injury) were the team’s sophomores.

The swingers (JV and varsity) this year were, Jason Yoon, Jon Morris and Danny Bradley, all sophomores with senior Sam Skiles. Freshmen David Ahmann, Luke Mason, Knox Merkle and Miles Whitling, all played with junior Joel Courtney on the JV team coached by Jon Williams.

Logos Basketball started in October when the Junior High Boys took the court. They had two teams, each of which finished the season 2-6. The Blue Team included eighth graders Bryan Vis and Calvin Michaels; seventh graders Bennett Schlect, Ben Euhus, Colson Richter, and August Igelski; and sixth graders Rory Wilson, Cam Vis, and Jonah Grieser. The Gold Team included eighth graders David Popoola and Karsten Schumaker; seventh graders Nic Minudri, Nathan Miller; and sixth graders Joseph Ahmann, Isaac Blum, Jake Hughes, Gabe Jones, and Ben Dooley.

Senior Trevor Morse averaged 10 ppg and was named to the Whitepine All League Second Team.

Junior Levi Wintz averaged 12 ppg and received Whitepine All League Honorable Mention.

Photos by Donn Morse

Junior Paul Ryan led the team with 20 ppg, earning a place on the Whitepine All League First Team and 1A Division II All-Idaho Second Team.

Junior Jonny Handel earned the Knight’s Award for his all-out, all-the-time play.

Knowledge Bowl

The Logos Knowledge Bowl team, coached by Wes Struble, went undefeated in league competition this year. On February 8, they competed in the regional tournament in Spokane at Whitworth University. National Science Bowl competitions, sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy, follow a question-and-answer format where students have only seconds to respond to either multiple choice or short-answer questions. The questions test their knowledge on subjects including biology, chemistry and physics. The team consisted of seniors Stuart Evans, Sage Pratt, Matthew (D'Art) Carroll, Jonathan Nance, and sophomore Jon Morris.

The junior high team, coached by Andrew Isker, had three wins and four losses. The team included: eighth grader Luther Michaels; seventh graders Bennett Schlect, Ben Dooley, Ben Euhus, and Nate Miller; and sixth graders David Handel and Cameron Vis.

2012 Alum Wins Concerto Competition

Sarah Nadreau '12, mezzosoprano, was honored as a winner in the Whitworth Orchestra Concerto Competition. Sarah is a vocal performance major at Whitworth University, where she is a student of Scott Miller.

Sarah has been singing in choirs and ensembles for most of her life, and she began solo instruction her senior year of high school. During this time Sarah developed a passion for theater and musical theater. She has played numerous roles, including Aunt Eller in Oklahoma! and Maria Von Trapp in The Sound of Music, as well as Isaac in Whitworth's fall production of The Wakefield Mysteries and several roles in the 2013 Whitworth opera workshop: Long Story, Short.

In 2103 Sarah participated in the National Association of Teachers of Singing competition at Central Washington University and won third place in her division.
